WELCOME

GLOBAL CYBER CONFERENCE 5

Dear speakers, partners, and guests,

Five years ago, we founded the Global Cyber Conference on a simple belief: no organization can build security alone. Every company depends on systems, partners, and people beyond its own walls. Security depends on cooperation.

That belief guides our fifth edition. Cyber incidents can stop physical operations. AI now makes decisions and takes action inside business systems. Progress in quantum computing is changing how organizations must protect sensitive data. These forces arrive together, and they reach the same leaders.

We call this convergence.

Our program is built around that reality. The first day focuses on global cyber priorities, the changing role of the CISO, security teams, culture, and lessons from real incidents. The second day looks ahead to quantum security, data trust, AI governance, and the future of work. One question runs through both: how do you turn this complexity into clear decisions?

Over two days at The Dolder Grand, our keynotes, panels, and roundtable sessions bring together experience from different countries, sectors, and roles. I invite you to ask difficult questions, share what has worked and what hasn't, and learn from perspectives beyond your own.

On the first evening, we'll also celebrate the winners of the Swiss CISO Awards. The awards recognize leaders who take responsibility, build trust, and strengthen security within their organizations and beyond.

Thank you for bringing your knowledge and curiosity to Zurich. I hope the conversations over these two days lead to ideas and decisions that continue well beyond the conference.

Welcome to the fifth Global Cyber Conference.

Chair of the Global Cyber Conference

2026 FOCUS: CONVERGENCE

The Global Cyber Conference 2026 brings cybersecurity, AI security, and post-quantum security into one conversation. Their convergence is changing how organizations operate, how they are attacked, and how digital trust is protected.

CYBERSECURITY

Cyber risk now travels through strategy, operations, supply chains, and people. The question is whether leaders can recognize an incident early, respond decisively, and keep the business running, without losing trust.

AI SECURITY

AI makes defenders faster and allows attackers to scale. It also introduces systems that can act with limited oversight. Security now means protecting AI, governing its use, and knowing when not to trust it.

POST-QUANTUM SECURITY

Quantum risk is not a distant problem. Data captured today may be decrypted years later. The immediate task is to identify exposure, set priorities, and begin a controlled transition to quantum-safe cryptography.
